lish Harem.

It is a curious fact that while women of the lower classes in Siam have always enjoyed the greatest freedom, participating and competing with men in the business and pleasures of life, the ladies of the royal household have been kept in the background, appearing at only the most private social gatherings and never at public or official functions. As all former sovereigns had in their harens the cream of the aristocracy of the country, and, as they inevitably felt a hesitant chivalry about exhibiting their "wives" in public, they barred all women of rank from sight. The sovereign is expected to have in his harem a member of every influential family in the country, for it is considered that in no other way could be be in such close touch with the people of his kingdom. Polygamy has, therefore, been considered an obligation of royalty. But, curiously enough, the present reigning monarch is a bachelor, the first and only bachelor who has sat upon the throne of his fathers in twenty-five hundred years. And thereby hangs a tale, for marriage by a Slamese sovereign has meant not the simple taking of one wife, or a dozen, or even a mere hundred, but the wholesale adoption of a thousand or more. The young king's father and his father's father. and each of the long line of kings preceding them, had many wives. His father had between seven and eight thousand. And, when the young crown prince returned from his long stay in Europe-he had passed a third of his life there-he was told by his royal father that there had been selected for him a number of court beauties from which he could take his choice of a hundred or two for his barem. But the prince would have nothing to do with this wholesale acquisition of a husband's holdings. "When I marry." he declared to his astonished father, "it will be to one wife and to no more, and she shall be the one queen of my heart and the one queen of my realm. -From "The Land of the White Elephant," by Frederick Dean, in Asia Magazine.

always boding its ruin. Such a one then lived in Philadelphia; a person of note, an elderly man, with a wise look and a very grave manner of speaking; his name was Samuel Mickie.

The gentleman, a stranger to me, stopped one day at my door and naked me if I was the young man who had lately opened a new printing house. Being answered in the affirmative, he said he was sorry for me, because it was an expensive undertaking, and the expense would be lost; for Philadelphia was a sinking place, the people already half bankrupt, or near being so; all appearances to the contrary, such as new buildings and the rise of rents, being to his certain knowledge fallacious; for they were, in fact, among the things that would soon ruln us. And he gave me such a detail of misfortunes now existing, or that were soon to exist, that he left me half melancholy.

Had I known him before I engaged in this business, probably I never should have done it. This man continued to live in this decaying place, and to declaim in the same strain, refusing for many years to buy a house there, because all was going to destruction; and at last I had the pleasure of seeing him give five times as much for one as he might have bought it for when he first began his creaking. -Autobiography of Benjamin Frank-

With that the major launched out upon a long lecture on the significance and value of the salute, while the lieutenant, now standing stiffly at atten-tion, was dreached to the skin.

A few days later the major was atflicted with toothuche and sought the services of a dental surgeon. As he reclined in the chair, he thought be detected a peculiar expression of satisfaction on the young dentist's face. "Look here," he said suddenly.

"Haven't I seen you before?" "Yes, sir," was the answer, "you were speaking to me the other morning about saluting-"

"Great Scott!" yelled the major, leaping from the chair and starting for the door, "I've had some close calls in my time, but never anything to compare with this one."-Judge.

Wild Goose Hides Eggs.

The domestic goose is derived from wild species. The pioneer vettlers saw their domestic geese run wild in bushes and almost revert to their primitive state. Now, the goose constructs a very pretentious nest on the ground. The eggs are so large and white that they would attract unfriendly notice at a considerable distance. To avoid this dangerous publicity the eggs are constructed to the ground of the construction licity the eggs are carefully covered

HOME BUILDING DRIVE LAUNCHED BY DETROITERS

BANKERS AND REALTY VETERAN FORM MILLION DOLLAR CORPORATION

Build City Each Year

CORPORATION PLANS TO HOUSE MORE THAN 3,000 HOME-LESS ANNUALLY

DETROIT, June 11. - With the warm approval of both local and state authorities, a new million-dollar housing corporation has begun on a scale nitherto unknown, an effort to cope with the alarming shortage of work men's homes in the city and its immediate suburbs.

This enterprise-the Bankers' Land and Investment Corporation - enters the field with a complete realty and building service. It owns large subdivisions of attractive homesites, employs its own architects and builders and is fully financed to supply home-seekers with necessary loans to enable them to build immediately.

The Corporation also maintains rental and general realty sales departments as well as writing the neces-sary insurance for its clients.

Backed by Big Men

Frederic H. Zeigen, a veteran large scale operator in Detroit realty and building, is president and general manager, his associates on the directorate being Clarence H. Wilcox, Corporation Counsel of the City of Detroit; Leslie B. Robertson, for six years head of the Ford Motor Co. legal department and a stockholder in five banks and trust companies; Richard D. Cudmore, cashier of the Peo-ple's State Bank, Michigan's largest former assistant auditor of the Max-well-Chalmers Motor Co. and member of the personal staff of Walter E Flanders.

Although the enterprise is partly based on a desire to provide a standard reputable concern to which home seekers may come for counsel and expert advice, it is being managed as a purely business enterprise and em-bodies no element of philanthropy. President Zeigen declares that the corporation plans during the present year to house at least 3.000 persons now homeless—a construction rate that will be steadily increased as soon as the present shortage of labor in the building trades can be remedied.

Can't Catch Up

Detroit is now, according to gov-eroment survey, short more than 38,000 homes. Though it is building nearly 200 new homes each week, this is not a sufficient increase to house the weekly additions to the city's population estimated by the Police De-partment census at 400 persons a day. Experts believe that it will be many vears before the housing accommo-lations of Michigan's metropolis will be restored to normal, and predict that, when that stage is reached, De-troit will be as large as Chicago.
